Above cover was posted with a handstamped blue "Due 3" which was the normal rate as there was no concessionary rate. It was subsequently connected with a manuscript "24" to reflect the correct European rate. It also shows a "New York British Packet" transatlantic mark. In transit, it was remarked on the Cunard Ship to reflect the one shilling convention from 24 cents. Many 155th Brigade members also belonged to the Fenian Brotherhood and after the war, these veterans joined the 7th New York Regiment of the Irish Army of Liberation which in June 1866 joined the Fenian invasion of Canada.

"Head Quarters" cover of "Conoran's Irish Legion" posted at the 24 cents European rate by "New York British Packet" to New Ross, Ireland.

This is the only surviving portion of the original printing plate in private hands. It was given to Edward Dolan, a fifteen year old apprentice at Alex. Thom by his foreman as a souvenir of his first printing job; most of the rest of the plates were melted down. Incidentally Edward Dolan's father, Edmund, submitted designs for the 1922 Definitive series and some of the early commemoratives but none were accepted.

Antrim in Ireland, endorsed "Via Marseilles", franked by GB 1sh Embossed (cut to shape), canceled by a bluish "OXO" applied at Constantinople, with unclear blue "Post Office British Army" cds, London and Dublin transits, with Carrickfergus and Ballicarry arrival markings. The sender, Captain of the ship "Lady Russell" wrote that he was "ordered to be ready for sea tomorrow morning, I don't know whether we will go back to Balaklava or not. We are to be towed by the "Golden Fleece." The Crimean War was over by 30th March, 1856 and British troops evacuated by 12th July. Captain Samuel Smiley might have participated in the evacuation. The "OXO" cancel was used from 24 March 1855 to September 1856. An interesting Malta-Crimea-Ireland connection, with Robson-Lowe certificate, ex-Charles Hahn (cover was illustrated in "The Philatelist" July-August 1989) 1,000.00
