4007 ☒

Dr. Kulczycky's collection, extensively written-up exhibition style on pages, with 74 covers and field postcards, usually trilingual (German, Ukrainian and Hungarian) inscriptions, showing "Ukrainian Sich Army" handstamps, numerous items with corresponding seals and labels, usually addressed "from the field" to Vienna, with or without stamp or commemorative labels, variety of censor markings (Kolomyia, Lemberg, Przemyśl, Stanislaw), various unit identifications, K.u.K. Ukrainische Kader, K.u.K. Ukrainische Legion and other handstamps, several Prisoner of War cards from POW camps in Russia to the Ukrainian Legion headquarters in Vienna, military passes and furloughs, all with elaborate seals, different departure points within Western Ukraine, fine-v.f. Truly erudite study of postal history of the Ukrainian Legion. (The "Ukrainian Sich Riflemen" was the only Ukrainian unit in the Austrian army. Organized in Galicia in August 1914 at the initiative of the Supreme Ukrainian Council, it was supervised by the Ukrainian Combat Board. The first volunteers were members of Ukrainian paramilitary organizations, such as the Sich societies, Sokil, and Plast Ukrainian Youth Association. In September 1914 only 2,500 were accepted into the army and after brief training, they were moved to the Russian front in the Carpathian Mountains)

On 1 November 1918 a local provisional government was formed with representatives of Polish, Jewish, and Ruthenian inhabitants of the area. On 3 November, however, Ukrainian military unit overthrew the government, arrested its leader, and captured the eastern part of the city. The Ukrainian army was checked by a small Polish self-defense unit of World War I veterans and young Polish volunteers from Przemyśl high schools (later to be known as "Przemyśl Orleto", similar to the more famous Lwów Eaglets). The battlefield divided the city along the river San, with the western borough of Zasanie held in Polish hands and the Old Town controlled by the Ukrainians. Neither Poles nor Ukrainians could effectively cross the San, so both opposing parties decided to wait for a relief force from the outside, which arrived in the form of Polish volunteers on 10 November. When the subsequent Polish ultimatum to the Ukrainians remained unanswered, on 11-12 November the Polish forces crossed the San and forced out the outnumbered Ukrainians from the city in what became known as the 1918 Battle of Przemyśl).....
